ABOUT PROGRAM

Ankara University School of Medicine English Program which has been designed differently from Turkish one has been defined as a program which aims to graduate physicians who work nationally and internationally, supports research culture. The program is human system based and integrated in which student-centered learning methods are going to be used.

GOALS OF PROGRAM

Ankara University School of Medicine English Program aims to raise physicians who works nationally and internationally. Beside this, competencies related to research activities have been dominated in this program. Qualified international students are also expected to apply to the program.

OCCUPATIONAL PROFILE OF GRADUATES

Graduates from Ankara University School of Medicine English Program can work as physicians at hospitals of Universities, Ministry of Health and other health organizations. Besides this, they can act as an academic or scientific consultant in several health organizations. They can also work in other countries.

SUMMARY OF PROGRAM LEARNING OUTCOMES

Competencies of Ankara University School of Medicine English Program has been defined by roles of physicians. The graduates who completed the program are expected to be a good physician, to communicate effectively with patients, their relatives and health professionals, to have leadership, to be a team member, to act professionally, to think and act scientifically.